ACCOMMODATION

HOTEL DEL TEATRE 4* (REGENCOS)

Deep in Catalonia's Dali Triangle, this sleek hotel in an 18th-century building and converted rectory is a real find. Barcelona's elite had only to hear that their inspirational interiors architect Sandra Torrella was behind the ancient-meets-urban-chic style to book here in their droves for glamorous weekends; as soon as we arrived, we saw why. In the main building the lounge is stacked with international style magazines; outside, the terraces and balconies are decorated with tumbling bougainvillea and have views of the golden-hued village. The Rectory is a newer addition (we haven't seen it yet) and is separate from the main hotel, though guests have the same access to hotel services. Across the road, the restaurant is housed in the village's old theatre, dating back to 1800, and as you eat, old movies are projected onto the wall.

Wander the village and feel inspired by its Tuscan palette: burnt orange, pink and mustard yellow colour the ancient buildings, a central square is perfumed by flowers, fig trees are set around a medieval church, and just steps away, all you can see is fields of wild flowers. Leave if you can bear to and explore the medieval towns, beaches and chic restaurants of Catalonia at large.
